Embrace Stress

- Embrace stress. Sketching beyond failure limits doesn’t always feel good, but growing as a learner — the key, the fuel, and much of life — can happen at any stage.
Stress is a major problem for teenagers for example: school, especially homework, exams and pressure to do well, relationships with friends, boyfriends and girlfriends, lack of sleep, etc. If your life is full of stress there are some simple things that you can do to get your life to a more manageable level. For example: Simplify your schedule, a schedule is a major cause of high stress. Learn to say no to the rest and slowly get out of commitments that are not beneficial to you. Doing things that make your feel good for example, some people prefer reading a book, meditate, listen to music or take a nature walk. Find ways to have blast each day, even if it's just for a few minutes, spending time connecting with your family and friends also if you like to do exercise, you can go jogging or practice some sport. How did I do all of this? One thing at a time. I changed one habit a month, and gradually over the course of a year or two changed many things in my life.

I will not guarantee that all of these will work perfectly, because each person is different. Pick and choose the ones that will work best for you, and give them a try. One at a time.

2. Teaching Vocabulary

The teaching of vocabulary can be done using presentation and discovery techniques.

Presentation Techniques

These techniques involve the teacher presenting the meaning of the words as follows:

Realia. This technique means bringing the 'real' thing into the classroom. The teacher holds up the object, says the word, writes it on the board and then gets students to repeat it.

Pictures. These can be board drawings, wall pictures and charts, flashcards, magazine pictures and any other visual representation. They can illustrate concepts such as above and opposite as well as concrete nouns.

Mime, action and gesture. Actions are probably better explained by mime. Actions verbs or prepositions of movement are easy to present in this way.

Contrast. We can present the meaning of a word by contrasting it with its opposite. This technique can ensure students' understanding of a new word.

Enumeration. We can use a general word and explain it by enumerating or listing various items. We can say present the meaning of the 'appliance', 'clothes', 'vegetables', etc. using this technique.

Explanation. This can be used with intermediate students. The explanation of the meaning must include explaining any facts about its use or its register, too.

Translation. This technique could be useful when presenting the meaning of abstract words. However, its overuse could discourage students to from interacting with words.

Modelling. This can be used to present the pronunciation of a word. The teacher says the word and then gets both choral and individual repetition. He or she can use gesture, pictures or the board to indicate the main stress in a word.

Discovery Techniques

Using these techniques require students working out the meaning by themselves.

Matching. Students can match words to pictures or definitions. To do so, they will have to use their dictionaries whether bilingual or monolingual ones depending on their language level.

Find out. Students are given pictures and they have to find out the meaning of the numbered items. They have to find the new words from their background knowledge or from their peers.

Mind map. This technique helps students to group words into areas, thus to expand the sense relations of the word. E.g. Write all the words related to family members.

Word formation. Students are asked to find out the meaning of new words by looking at the suffixes or prefixes. E.g. pro-American, undercook, dishonest, etc.

Guessing the meaning. Students have to guess the meaning of words which have been related by using the context. Individually or in pairs they have to think of as many words as possible to fill in the passage.
Unit 5
Reading

What is reading?

Reading is one of the four language skills: reading, writing, listening, and speaking. It is a receptive skill, like listening. This means it involves responding to text, rather than producing it. Very simply we can say that reading involves making sense of text. To do this we need to understand the language of the text at word level, sentence level, and whole-text level. We also need to connect the message of the text to our knowledge of the world. Look at this sentence, for example:

The boy was surprised because the girl was much faster at running than he was.

To understand this sentence, we need to understand what the letters are, how the letters join together to make words, what the words mean, and the grammar of the words and the sentence. But we also make sense of this sentence by knowing that, generally speaking, girls do not run as fast as boys. Our knowledge of the world helps us understand why the boy was surprised.

Key concepts

Can you think of reasons why learners may find reading difficult?

A text is usually longer than just a word or a sentence. It often contains a series of sentences, as in a letter or even a postcard. These sentences are connected to one another by grammar and vocabulary and/or knowledge of the world. Reading also involves understanding the connection between sentences. For example:

The boy was surprised because the girl was much faster at running than he was. Then he found out that her mother had won a medal for running at the Olympic Games.

The second sentence gives us a possible reason why the girl was so good at running. But we can only understand that this is a reason if we know that Olympic runners are very good. This means we need to use our knowledge of the world to see the connection between these two sentences (coherence). The grammatical links between the sentences (cohesion) also help us see the connection between them. For example, in the second example sentence 'he' refers to the boy in the first sentence, and 'her' refers to the girl.

When we read we do not necessarily read everything in a text. What we read depends on why and how we are reading. For example, we may read a travel website to find a single piece of information about prices. But we may read a novel in great detail because we like the story and the characters and want to know as much as we can about them.

These examples show us that we read different text types and we read for different reasons. Some examples of written text types are letters, articles, postcards, stories, information brochures, letters, and poems. All these kinds of text types are different from one another. They have different lengths, layouts (the ways in which text is placed on the page), and kinds of language. Learning to read also involves learning how to handle these different text types.
b. Reinforce language
On the other hand, if you know that working on certain language structures or vocabulary is what your students need, this is the opportunity for you to work some language patterns presented in the listening or some related vocabulary. You can include some cloze or multiple choice exercises focusing either on grammar or vocabulary.

Example
Complete this text with one of the verbs from the box. Use the correct form of the verb.

5. TEACHING READING
Taking into account the nature of reading the following teaching stages for the teaching of reading are suggested:

Before reading
a. Arouse interest and help prediction
Encourage students to think about and discuss what they are going to read by using prompts such as realia, visuals, references to your students’ experiences and questions.

Focus your students’ attention on the text layout and format. Is it a magazine article, a letter, a brochure, etc? What can be predicted from the pictures or diagrams or tables accompanying the text?

At this stage, do not worry about the grammar mistakes since the aim is not accuracy but to interest and motivate students.

b. Teach any key words
Consider whether there are any words essential for the comprehension of the text that need to be pre-taught. Present these words through visuals, matching exercises, realia, translation, etc. Then, check if the meaning is clear for everyone. As students will encounter the new words in their written form, it is not necessary that they learn how they are pronounced.

c. Set a task to assist overall understanding
This can be in the form of two or three gist questions, or a task. It is also advisable to tell the students the type of strategies they might employ.

Example
Choose a headline from the three options given.

Don’t try to read everything. Just read the first sentence in each paragraph and try to get a general idea of what it’s about so that you can select the
Offers and suggestions

Making offers
- There are several ways of offering help to someone else:
  - Can I/we help you to cook dinner?
  - Shall I/we clean the car for you?
  - I can/I could/I'll lend you some money.
- Why don't I carry that bag for you?

Suggestions
- Let's/let's (not):
  - Let's take the a trip this summer.
  - Let's not take the ferry.
- Could:
  - (maybe) We could go to Costa Rica.
- Why don't...? Why doesn't...?
  - Why doesn't Tom call her tonight.
- Why not...?:
  - Why not call her right now.
  - How about...?
  - How about staying at youth hostels.
  - Yes, how about the hostel in the rain forest?

Order/Advice

To give orders and advice, we use:
- Must had better ought to/should could

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Strong</th>
<th>Less Strong</th>

</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Order</td>
<td></td>

</tbody>
</table>
- Must: when I tell you to do something
  - You really must start looking for a job.
- Advice
  - Should and ought to: to say that something is advisable.
    - They should/ought to go on some job interviews
  - Could: it's only used to give a suggestion.
    - You could go to see a doctor
  - Had better: when you believe that something bad will happen if the person does not follow the advice.
    - Kids, you'd better leave now, or you'll miss the school bus.
  - The full form had better is very formal. We usually use the contraction:'d better

Preferences/desires

Use prefer, would prefer and would rather to talk about things or activities that better than other things or activities
- Prefer and would prefer may be fulk a noun, a gerund, or an infinitive.
- I usually prefer the newspaper.
- Would Bill prefer reading a magazine?
- He would prefer to watch TV.

- Would rather: can only be followed by the base form of the verb.
  - I'd rather cook dinner at home.
- The negative of I'd rather is I'm not.
  - I'd rather not have dessert.

A comparison with to may be follow would prefer + noun/gerund.
- Lani prefers comedies to action movies.
- I prefer visiting friends to attending parties.
- A comparison with than may fol rather + base form of the verb.
  - They'd rather eat out than cook.

Necessity/obligation/prohibition

Obligation
- Must (the authority comes from the speaker):
  - Your father says to you: "You must be home by 10 o'clock."
- Have to: (there's an external authority reason)
  - You remember what your father said: "I have to be home by 10 o'clock.

Prohibition
- Mustn't it means "don't do it".
  - You mustn't open the door before you stop.

Necessity

To talk about something which you must do because you want but it's not necessary.
- Needn't
- don't need to
- don't have to
  - You needn't pay me back the money I owe me until next week.
There's an area in the Atlantic called the Bermuda Triangle. A lot of boats and planes have mysteriously disappeared there. It must be a strange place. People must feel worried when they cross it. It can't be easy for them. A friend of mine is on a yacht in the Triangle at the moment. He must be feeling nervous. He can't be enjoying the trip. So, is he crazy? He must be. I wouldn't go there. Does he know the risks? He must do.

Step 1

Deductions about the present: must/can't + infinitive

- We can use must + infinitive when we talk about a logical certainty derived from the information or evidence we have. We use can't + infinitive when we talk about a logical impossibility.

- People must be worried (because of the disappearances.)
- He can't be happy (because they're worried.)
- Note: the continuous forms must be + ing, e.g.,
  - He must be feeling nervous
  - He can't be enjoying the trip

- Note the short answers: is he crazy? He must be.
- Does he know the risks? He must do.

(For other uses of must/can't See Unit 27)

Put in must or can't:

1. People who cross the Triangle, they very worried.
2. They're very worried about the disappearances.
3. The writer's friend, he very worried at the moment.

Deductions about the past: must/can't + have + past participle

- We can use must + have + past participle when we talk about an event that must have happened.

- Is he worried? He must have been.
- Does he know the risks? He must have done.

Competencia: Lee Diversos tipos de textos en inglés como lengua extranjera: Se define como una interacción dinámica entre el lector, el texto y los contextos socioculturales que enmarcan la lectura. Se trata de una comprensión crítica porque supone un proceso activo de construcción del sentido de los diversos tipos de textos que lee a través de procesos de comprensión literal e inferencial, interpretación y reflexión. En tales procesos, el estudiante pone en juego habilidades, saberes y actitudes provenientes de su experiencia lectora y del mundo que lo rodea, tomando conciencia de las posibilidades y limitaciones que ofrece el lenguaje, la comunicación y el sentido.

Esta competencia también implica que el estudiante sea consciente que la lectura de textos cumple propósitos específicos, como disfrutar, resolver un problema o una duda, seguir instrucciones, investigar, defender una posición, entre otros.

Asimismo, la competencia considera la lectura de diversos tipos de textos, es decir, estos textos pertenecen a diferentes géneros, épocas y autores, y están situados en espacios y tiempos determinados. Esta diversidad textual se presenta en diferentes formatos y soportes, como el impreso, digital y multimodal, cada cual con sus características y particularidades.

Para construir el sentido de los textos que lee, es indispensable que el estudiante participe en prácticas sociales de lectura en inglés que se presentan en distintos grupos o comunidades socioculturales. Al participar en tales prácticas de lectura, el estudiante contribuye con su desarrollo integral, así como el de su propia comunidad, además de conocer e interactuar con contextos socioculturales distintos al suyo.

Esta competencia implica la combinación de las siguientes capacidades:

- Obtiene información del texto escrito: el estudiante localiza y selecciona información explícita en textos escritos con un propósito específico.

- Infiere e interpreta información del texto escrito: el estudiante construye el sentido del texto. Para ello, establece relaciones entre la información explícita e implícita de éste para deducir una nueva información o completar los vacíos del texto escrito. A partir de estas deducciones, el estudiante interpreta la relación entre la información explícita y la información explícita, así como los recursos textuales, para construir el sentido global y profundo del texto, y explicar el propósito, el uso estético del lenguaje, las intenciones del autor, así como la relación con el contexto sociocultural del lector y del texto.

- Reflexiona y evalúa la forma, el contenido y el contexto del texto escrito: los procesos de reflexión y evaluación están relacionados porque ambos suponen que el estudiante se dista del suscitado en los textos escritos situados en épocas y lugares distintos, y que son presentados en diferentes soportes y formatos. Para ello, compara y contrasta aspectos formales y de contenido del texto con la experiencia, el conocimiento formal del lector y diversas fuentes de información. Asimismo, emite una opinión personal sobre aspectos formales, estéticos, contenidos de los textos considerando los efectos que producen, la relación con otros textos, y el contexto sociocultural del texto y del lector.
